

Reading in Early Adolescence

The 'Boys reading' final conference aims to introduce educational approaches that respond to the interests, needs, and learning styles of adolescent boys, in attempt to engage adolescent boys and girls equally as readers and writers. The event addresses different groups of stakeholders, while specifically focusing on educators.

Two sessions will structure the event as follows: the plenary conference session will focus on disseminating the 'Boys reading' project results through case studies and poster session, while the paper session titled Reading in Early Adolescence will provide an ideal platform for teachers and educational experts to address a variety of topics dealing with reading in early adolescence. The proposed paper session strands are

- Boys Reading,
- Educating Young Readers,
- Overcoming Reading Difficulties – Pedagogical Challenges, and
- Reading in the Digital Age.

By means of a number of key notes, case studies, posters and thematic papers, different aspects of boys reading and reading in early adolescence will be discussed.

Audience

The conference's target audience are educational institutions, public institutions, teachers, librarians and other educational experts interested in the area of reading, literacy development and teacher training.

Working language: Croatian/English

Save the date

The Faculty of Humanities and Social Sciences, University of Split has the pleasure of welcoming you soon at the:

Transnational 'Boys reading' Conference
Faculty of Humanities and Social Sciences

Klerikat, Put iza nove bolnice 10c, Split

03 June 2016, 09.00-18.00

The Boys Reading Consortium is looking forward to meet you soon in Croatia!

Register now at <http://boysreading.org>

Participation is free of charge

Registration closes at 22 May 2016

Consortium

